Non-thermal Processing with Plasma Technologies

Research Workshop on Non-Thermal Plasma Techniques for Pollution Control, held in Cambridge University on 21 - 25 September 1992, was conceived as a step towards that goal. These two volumes contain the proceedings of that workshop. Non-thermal plasmas are plasmas in which the electron mean energies are Non-thermal plasma techniques offer an innovative approach to the solution of some of these problems. There are many types of non-thermal plasma devices that have been developed for environmental applications.

Non-Thermal Plasma Techniques for Pollution Control techniques using non-thermal plasmas have been widely studied because it is one of the promising technologies for pollution control with higher energy efficiency [1]-[7]. The non- ... non-thermal plasma is high pressure (typically 1 atmospheric pressure) non-equilibrium plasma. Compared with that cold plasma, the electron temperature and ...

Non-Thermal Plasma Technic for Air Pollution Control

Using Non-Thermal Plasma to Control Air Pollutants INTRODUCTION This paper is about using a non-thermal plasma process to remove pollutants from emissions. It is probably a good idea to begin with the definition of non-thermal plasma. As we learned in grade school, matter exists in three phases: solid, liquid, and gas (for example; ice, liquid, and
